2. No consensus on Justice Ayesha Malik's Supreme Court appointment

What's going on? The Judicial Commission of Pakistan (JCP) did not approve the nomination of Lahore High Court (LHC) Justice, Ayesha Malik, as a Supreme Court judge. The vote was a 4-4 split, meaning, it was a tie, and not majority approval (P.S. one judge was absent from the meeting). If approved, Justice Malik would have been Pakistan's first woman judge of the Supreme Court. Her nomination was considered a step towards women empowerment.

The details: Judges appointed to the Supreme Court must have five years of experience as high court judges. Justice Malik has nine years of experience and ranks number four on the seniority list of LHC judges. The lawyers who opposed Justice Malik's nomination claimed she is not "senior" enough for a judicial appointment to the Supreme Court.
