2. The UK removes Pakistan from its travel red list:

- The UK will remove Pakistan from its travel “red list” on September 22. The “red list” includes countries that the UK considers “particularly high-risk” for COVID-19. The “red list” rules only allowed British or Irish nationals, or people with residence rights, to enter the UK. According to the UK government’s website, Pakistan will be moved to its “amber list” for entering the country. However, a CNN Travel report said the UK is “simplifying” its system for international travel. Instead of continuing with the red-amber-green traffic light system, the UK will have a single “red list” of countries. Fully vaccinated travelers from a “non-red” country won’t have to take a pre-departure COVID-19 test before arrival.
